
benefit car show/ bbq cookoff?

Posted by flyinhillbilly - 2008/07/04 13:43

hey guys, i've been thinking about trying to get some kind of fundraiser event going. i was thinking about maybe have a combination car show and bbq cookoff. i don't know anything about organizing something like this, so i'm just putting the idea out there. i think if we break a car show into several categories so that a race car isn't competing against a $75000 show car, and a daily driver that we could maybe muster a good turnout. also if we were to have a bbq cookoff the that was judged on votes then it would be an added value to the people that came out and looked at the cars since they wouldn't have to buy lunch too. we could charge enough to enter the car show to cover the trophies, and donate the gate fee to whatever charity (i vote some manner of food bank) that we deem suitable. it would be nice to try and find a radio station to donate some coverage of the event and maybe help drive attendance up. i don't have any idea if any of this is feasible at all, but i just had the idea, and will commit to it if we can make it a reality (and i will bribe people to vote for me :P). opinions please.

I like the idea of that.

I'm all for it, the biggest thing is that you have to talk Wes into it.

I was considering seeing what it would cost to just rent the whole place for an evening, and see if that cost could be negated by the gate fees or whatever.

I have a whole ebook on organizing car shows and whatnot, and tried to do that last year but everything got put on the shelf from the heart attack.

it wouldn't have to be held at the track would it? i was thinking that if we were to try and do something like this in springfield that maybe we could find a venue that would help us out and maybe not break the bank. also, i think we would draw more spectators if they didn't have to drive out to the track. don't get me wrong, doing it at the track would be super cool, but it don't have to be there to be good. maybe we could find a company that would let us use thier parking lot for the positive publicity that should be generated.

Re:benefit car show/ bbq cookoff?

Posted by ArcadeGuest - 2008/07/04 17:50

I wouldnt want to do it at the track either

Re:benefit car show/ bbq cookoff?

Posted by flyinhillbilly - 2008/07/04 22:33

well, it's not so much that i wouldn't want to do it at the track, but the fact that the track would most likley be cost prohibitive since we'd be trying to raise funds for more than just to support the event. of course until someone actually talks to wes, this is all just speculation about cost.

I agree. I think the cost of renting the track would offset the amount of money made. I don't see why anpac or someone like that wouldn't donate their parking lot. I might even be able to convince Burlington-Northern to let us use the lot here at work. I wonder if we could maybe get a few businesses to throw in some door prizes? :)

The plan last year was to rent the lot at the old Ducks stadium... it's freaking HUGE. They even set up a racetrack every month there and run road courses. And it was really cheap, something like 300 bucks.

That's a hell of a deal. The local scca is out there 1 sunday a month. I usually see them on my way to work. That would be a pretty good place to go since it's a big open area.

Re:benefit car show/ bbq cookoff?

Posted by flyinhillbilly - 2008/07/05 19:33

that sounds like a good plan devin, i'd even kick in half the rent if it was a lousy $300.

It all about how much drive you have hillbilly. I had to call Mrs Orchard my old high school councilor a couple years ago and rub in that I made quite a bit more than her. Pretty big difference from her predictions of me. I should call her now that I am making even more than then HAHA, bitch. You are correct, busted ass to get here, but if you refuse to make small money and set your sights on better jobs you can get there. If you settle and stop fighting, well, then you get what you get.

Fantastic!! I need all the help with shopping that I can get. Most of the time I doubt if I match but I would never know. Believe it or not I dated a guy who wouldn't let me leave the house until I changed either my shirt or my shoes because they didn't match!

Ok, now that last sentence is important because it determines whether I get to go into the dressing room or not, so I'll say I'm gay if i get to go in. :woohoo:

It is good to know your putting in a dyno might have to sit down and talk to you about working out a deal to do some custom tuning. I have a customer now and am doing a custom tune for their car. A good dyno would give some real time data logging without having to always go to the track and make it easier to make adjustments.
