
I HATE ROLL CAGES!!!

Posted by JDMyers - 2008/08/31 13:50

Ok I will never ever put a cage in a car again and try to paint it and make it nice. lol. I've been sanding and painting the cage today. Sucks..very hard and dirty. But in the end I think it will look sweet!! I'll post pics up later!

Wow, you have really torn that car down to nuts and bolts. I had no idea that you were going that deep.

Hurry up already! In The Fast and The Furious they took a car from a junkyard salvage to final paint in about 7 minutes... so what's the hold up? :)

<http://www.streettostrip.com/images/fbfiles/images/bodywork1.JPG> Heres the engine bay,
Its going to be flat black and all my goodies and block will be Red. I hoping to have it in primer the week of Street Machines.

Whats everyones thoughts on the cage?

Man with an F-body..its almost a need. The flex soo bad. I got weld in sub frame ties when I did the cage..so I hope it keeps the car from twisting!

I built SFC for mine, and it helped a LOT. It was noticable right away. Now, when I jack up the car, no matter where I put the jack the whole side comes up. haha.

I just got through with the cage in my 85 5.0 it kinda sucks doing , but it will be worth it. mine kinda articulated a little before hand. i also got a wolfe anti-roll bar to go along with the roll cage to help. good luck with your car, its lookin good so far. when u get it done we should have a classic Ford versus Chevy race.

Dano, if that keeps the low wheel up with the high wheel in your famous LT1 picture, that thing will look killer.

Why go with a 4 cylinder? That's wasteful. It would be more politically correct for you to install an old 3 cylinder motor out of a dead Geo Sprint. You'll get all of 70 or so horsepower and the wonderful smugness that infects all Prius owners, while you cleverly hide the fact that you are actually getting LESS gas mileage than you would with a high power motor.
